

Realities and Tendencies of Health Public Services Management

Ion PLUMB, Professor Ph. D
Andreea ZAMFIR, Senior Teaching
Assistant, Ph. D Student

Abstract: The profound changes in the health care system, its complexity, the public service type of those services and the environment of the health care institutions are some of the factors that led to the growth and progress in health care sector management.

The medical activity is carried out under specific conditions having very different goals and objectives comparing to other fields of activity. We present in this paper the general objectives of the reform in the health care sector and institutions, its dynamic factors, the roles, responsibilities, strategic and operational actions in the de-centralization process of health care services.