

The Macroeconomic Management and its Prevision Function

Elvira NICA, Lecturer, Ph.D
Bucharest Academy of Economic Studies
Gheorghe H. POPESCU, Lecturer, Ph.D
Christian University Dimitrie Cantemir, Bucharest

Abstract: The management or the leading is the most evident and dynamic element of the operating mechanism in a economic system or organism.

The defining of the macroeconomic management takes into consideration two aspects, namely: on one side, the theoretical, scientific aspect that involves the elaboration of some principles, methods and techniques of operating with general character that, transposed into practice, provide the optimum of the society productive potential and, on the other side, the aspect of the practical action, empiric, pragmatic one, that involves the transposition of the corresponding principles, methods and techniques to the concrete conditions where the economic system works and their improvement with a view to the reality requirements in a permanent development and perfection.

The macroeconomic management has an objective nature, because the economic activities have all the characteristics of a certain social activities, the management of the leading being the specific attribute of such activities.

The management means to guide, to direct, to take decision, to determine.